

Integrated Payments

Seamlessly connect your card payment terminal with your EPOS system to save time, reduce errors, and improve customer service.

Save time

Amounts are sent automatically to the card machine, eliminating duplicate entry and speeding up service.

Reduce errors

Automatic transfers help prevent miskeying and improve the accuracy of cashing up and reconciliation.

Keep trading during outages

If your EPOS goes down, the terminal can switch to non-integrated mode so you can still take payments.

Two ways to take payments

Pay at Table

Designed for restaurants: staff can print, split bills, and add tips directly at the table using the card machine.

Pay at Counter

Designed for retail, cafés, and pubs: amounts are pushed automatically from the EPOS to the terminal.

How it works

- 1 The EPOS and card terminal are connected through the cloud.
- 2 Staff enter the sale amount once in the EPOS.
- 3 The amount is securely transmitted to the card machine.
- 4 The customer pays.
- 5 Transaction records sync automatically for reconciliation.

Perfect for busy businesses

Ideal for businesses that process many transactions each day or have multiple staff taking payments, including hospitality, retail, leisure, and service businesses.

The bottom line

Integrating your card terminals with your EPOS increases efficiency, reduces payment-entry mistakes, simplifies reconciliation, and improves customer service – without major hardware changes.

Smarter payments. Happier customers. Stronger business.
